EMPLOYEE VOLUNTEERING IN ACTION

Reflecting on 2025

In 2025, employees across Canada demonstrated what is possible when learning, engagement, and community impact are intentionally connected. Working alongside our corporate and community partners, Volunteer Canada delivered a national model for Employer-Supported Volunteering (ESV) that made it easier for employees to learn about social issues, take meaningful action, and reflect on their participation within the communities where they live and work. The result was volunteering that was relevant, accessible, and grounded in real community needs.

This work took place at a time when many community organizations are being asked to do more with less. Increased demand, limited resources, and ongoing volunteer shortages continue to strain essential services across the country. In this context, coordinated employee volunteering must go beyond one-time support. Through predictable engagement and shared planning, we have helped strengthen the infrastructure that enables organizations to sustain programs, respond to emerging needs, and maintain safe, welcoming, and accessible spaces for the people they serve.

National Impact Snapshot

Partners for Change

At Volunteer Canada, we are proud to work alongside corporate, community, and network partners who share a commitment to building engaged and inclusive communities across Canada.

This year, we collaborated with over 24 community partners, including local nonprofits, national charities, and grassroots organizations, to facilitate transformative knowledge exchange through volunteering experiences designed alongside community partners to meet specific, locally identified needs.

Through our network of over 900 organizational members, Volunteer Canada supports the infrastructure that enables high-quality employee volunteering through shared planning, cross-sector collaboration, and coordinated support.

As we look ahead to the International Volunteer Year (IVY) 2026, we remain focused on building partnerships that are reciprocal, responsive, and sustainable for communities and organizations alike.

BEYOND THE ACTIVATION STORIES

When Employees Lead with Local Knowledge

UPS Canada | London, ON

At the London UPS activation, employees reshaped the experience by bringing their own local knowledge to the forefront. These drivers move through their neighbourhoods every day and knew exactly where the kits would have the greatest impact. By trusting employees to lead distribution directly into their community, the activation became faster, more personal, and grounded in place. It was a powerful reminder that when people are given autonomy, community care becomes instinctive.

Where Co-Creation Becomes Transformation

AbbVie | Montreal, QC

This activation began months before volunteers ever picked up a paintbrush. Working closely with Women on the Rise, the project was co-created based on what the community said would make their space feel more welcoming, safe, and dignified. This approach emphasized inclusive participation and meeting need where it exists. On the day of the activation, volunteers worked side by side with women who use the centre, sharing stories, meals, and purpose while transforming the space together. The result was not just a refreshed building, but a shared experience that built empathy, understanding, and lasting connection.

Consistency as Strategy

Synopsys | ON

For Synopsys, impact has come through returning, not rotating. Over three consecutive years, teams across Canada have gone back to the same community partners, deepening trust and understanding with each visit. What began as annual volunteer days has grown into ongoing relationships, with employees returning independently, fundraising, and advocating for the organizations they now know well. This consistency has turned one-day activations into sustained community investment.
